

Jeffrey Pompe

Jeffrey Pompe is a Professor of Economics at Francis Marion University. Professor Pompe received his doctorate at The Florida State University. He is co-author of Environmental Conflict: In Search of Common Ground and has published numerous articles in professional journals and chapters in several books. His current research interests include environmental economics, economic development, urban sprawl, and coastal resource economics.