

James Simons

James Simons is a coastal ecologist for Texas Parks and Wildlife. He received his PhD in Biological Oceanography from Texas A&M University. He currently manages the Texas component of EPA's National Coastal Assessment and is co-manager of a GLO funded oyster reef mapping project in Lavaca Bay. His research interests include indicators of ecosystem health, marine food webs and essential fish habitat.